re, of course, appreciated that the ition to enact a graduated inhercould honestly differ. I am, therewilling to concede to Governor k, in vetoing the Dudley Graded sritance Tax bill, the same honesty urpose that influenced me in framing measure and urging its passage Le Legislature. I am all the more rinced of this because of the fact t the Governor, in the memorandum with his veto, has avoided any refce to the socialistic and commuic clap-trap that many of the oppots of the bill have indulged in. ate conversation with me he has pressed the opinion, in his usually ir way, that there was no socialism bile thus crediting the Governor h the best of motives, I cannot but I it was exceedingly unfortunate it he should disapprove the bill, This was designed to correct a crying ention with reasonable fairness ong all classes of the community. In the discussion that has followed the production of this bill no one has ired deny that the present tax system inefficient and unjust in its practical eration; that under it the small propy owner, the farmer, the mechanic I the business man of limited means obliged to bear much more than oir fair share of the burden of taxa-

n, while the owner of large personal perty bears only a fraction of the I be should bear under the law as it w reads. This fact cannot be dised or explained away.

In Richmond County six-tenths of 1 per cent of the ased property is personalty; in Kings unty the proportion is 41-3 per cent personalty; In Mouroe County, 5 6-10 cent; in Eric County, 6 4-10 per cent, d in Onondaga, 6 7-10 per cent. Twery well informed person knows t in these large, wealthy and popucountles the amount of personalty in excess of the realty, yet the unt of personalty reported for tax is y a fraction of the whole. Great ites are composed chiefly of personal erty, and therefore are more sucal in evading the tax gatherer.

It took nearly five thousand to meet the rid is worth something in such a mat-. Every cilivized country of imporice in Europe has attempted to enrce a general property tax, has falled nd has abandoned the attempt. I do of believe that the great army of asmors, not only in this State, but broughout the country, are either naves or fools. The great majority of tem are seeking to enforce the law as st they can, and frankly acknowledge or do I think that all the thrift of State is found among the millionon. I believe that the great body our farmers are thrifty, industrious, ertainly economical, otherwise they d not support themselves and their llies under existing conditions; and, y mind, the highest exhibition of mical thrift which we can find in Sinte is that of men whose wages amount to more than $600 ev $700 a year, not only supporting themselves and their families, but, with their savings, acquiring and furnishing homes.

These two classes of citizens seem to me entitled to fair consideration. A tax of $5.34 upon a farm may seem a trivial amount, but at present prices of farm products that represents the net profit on from three to five acres of land, and it is no small thing for the State to take the results of the labor involved in that amount of tillage from the farmer whose farm is worth $2,000.

The Best Way to Tax. It is alleged by the opposition that the provisions of this bill are unfair, because a large estate is made to pay more in proportion than a small one; that each dollar of a man's property should bear the same burden of taxation. In theory, this sounds well; but in fact the fair and best way to levy a tax is to spread it according to the ability of the tax payers to bear the

To Illustrate, take three estates, one of $500,000, one of $50,000, and one of $500. The owner of the $500,000 estate could pay a 10 per cent tax and not know it, except as he consulted his books; the owner of the $50,000 estate might possibly be deprived of a few luxuries by the payment of the 10 per cent tax, but for the $500 estate to pay this tax would be to deprive the owner of the necessities of life in the care

Principle Not a Novelty. The principle of taxing according to broke out into violence in the early hours ability to pay is not new, even in this of the morning. It is now in tractical operation in would pay a tax according to its earning capacity as follows:

If it carned 6 per cent dividend it would pay $150 tax; If it earned 7 per cent dividend it would pay $175 tax; If it earned 8 per cent dividend it would pay $200 tax; if it carned 9 per cent dividend it would pay $225 tax; if it carned 10 per cent dividend it would pay $250 tax; if it earned 11 per cent dividend it would pay $275 tax; if it earned 12 per cent dividend it would pay $300 tax; If it earned 13 per cent dividend it would pay $325 tax; if it earned 14 per cent dividend it would pay $350 tax; if it earned 15 per cent dividend it would pay $375 tax.

The only objection worthy of consideration raised against this graded Inheritance Tax bill is that it would drive the wealthy out of the State if made a law. Let us look at this phase of the subject. The average life of a man is about thirty-two years. During the past thirty-two years the average State tax rate has been 4.22 of a mill on the dollar. It follows, therefore, that the farmer and owner of real estate have prid 18 5-10 per cent of their belongings into the State Treasury during that period. That maximum rate on lineals in the vetoed Inheritance Tax bill was only 10 per cent. Hence personal property under this bill would fare better at the maximum rate than real estate has in the past.

But that is not the real point in the case with the opposition. Personal property-patricularly the personal property of large estates-almost invariably escapes taxation. This veteed bill provided a way to compel it to pay something like a fair proportion of the tax burden. The opposition to the but served notice that if it became a law the rich would move out of the State. That is to say, we are given to understand that if the millionaire is placed on an equality with other taxpayers, if he is required to pay his share of taxation, as the farmer and the small realty owner are, he will remove from the State.

A Significant Record. For my part, I do not take any stock in such declarations. At all events I believe, with Professor Max West, of Columbia College, that the graded inheritance tax idea has come to stay. The record of this bill in the Legislature is significant and instructive in t

When it was introduced in the As-sembly the sentiment was adverse to to the principle of the bill. It was referred to the Committee on Taxation and Retrenchment, and there thoroughly considered and (iscussed. The more It was considered the more it grew in favor, and was returned to the Asembly favor, and was returned to the Assembly it was quite freely discussed, five speeches being made upon it, and its provisions and conditions fully ex-

It was passed by the Assembly by a unanimous vote. It then went to the Senate Committee and was again thoroughly discussed. It was reported back to the Senate by a unanimous vote, and on two separate occasions was discussed in that body, many of the Sena-tors participating in the debate, and was finally passed by a vote of thirtyfour in the affirmative to five in the negative. The better the principles underlying this graded inheritance tax scheme are understood the more it grows in public favor.
